

Gary Moyer Biography

Gary Moyer, vice president for administration of the Carolina Conference, is a first-generation Seventh-day Adventist. He grew up in the Lutheran church, but was only a nominal Christian. He never really knew Christ as his personal Savior until the summer of 1986 after listening to Zig Ziglar, a Christian motivational speaker, give his testimony.

Gary holds a B.A. degree in religion ('91) from Southern College, along with a Masters of Divinity degree from Andrews University Seminar. His resume includes serving as a pastor in the Carolina Conference beginning in 1991 and executive secretary of the Carolina Conference beginning in 2006.

In his last year at the seminary Gary lost Laurie, his wife of 13 years, when she succumbed to Cystic Fibrosis. He is now happily married to Lisa Nickless who he refers to as his "much better half." They have two boys: Michael and Andrew.

In November of 2013, Gary had the privilege of being certified as a Ziglar Legacy Trainer, in the founding class of trainers. He now offers keynote speeches and workshops on personal development, winning relationships, and goals as part of his ministry.

Gary loves the Lord, God's remnant church, and preaching and sharing God's life-changing truths. His personal mission statement is: To prepare for Christ's return by sharing the distinct biblical truths and love of Christ that change lives for the better, and forever.
